

PARTICIPANTS NEEDED FOR AN EXCITING PSYCHOLOGICAL STUDY!

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED!

My name is Phyllis Alongi, a doctoral student at California Institute of Integral Studies (CIIS) in San Francisco. Are you interested in participating in a research study that explores what the client brings to the psychotherapeutic process? I am looking for participants who identify as transpersonal psychotherapists and/or counseling practitioners. Participants must have at least three years experience post certification/training and be currently working in private practice with adults.

Participation involves a single one-hour confidential, one-on-one interview via Zoom video conference with the researcher scheduled at your convenience.

Your participation will make a valuable contribution to psychotherapy, counseling, and transpersonal psychology. Identifying the role of the client may help clients increase their preparedness for therapy. In addition, you may benefit by gaining deeper insight and perspective into your clinical and counseling experiences. Your participation may further research about the client's role in the therapeutic alliance and client outcomes.

If you or anyone you know may be interested in participating, I would like to have a brief telephone conversation with you to discuss participation.

Please contact me for further information.

Sincerely,

Phyllis Alongi, LPC, ACS
